NAZIS AGAIN TOLD TO STOP TERRORISM

Political Murder
At Kiel.

"RED" AGITATORS ARRIVE
FROM RUSSIA

Berlin, To-day.

Herr Spiegel, the solicitor who acted for the German Socialist Party in many political lawsuits, was shot dead at his home at 7 a.m. to-day "by an unknown person or persons."

Chancellor Hitler has again warned the Nazis to refrain from terrorism.

It is reported that the authorities have the "best evidence" that M. Belakun the Dictator of the "Red" Republic in Hungary after the war, and M. Mix Hoels, leader of the "Red" revolution in Saxony in 1921, have entered Germany from Russia with the object of re-organising Communist activities.—Reuter.

The New Reichstag will, according to an official communiqué, assemble in the first week of April in the Potsdam Garrison Church which, however, contrary to earlier arrangements, will not be the scene of the subsequent meetings. The future venue is not fixed as yet.

The communiqué also forecasts the immediate introduction of the bill investing the National Government with plenary powers. The bill requires for its passage a two-thirds majority.

The abolition of the Black-Red-Gold flag, which was introduced as the German flag after the Revolution, and the restoration of the Black-White-Red banner as the national colours is demanded by the National People's Party.

The developments in Germany following the National Socialist victory at the polls were described as "an organic and bloodless revolution" by the chief of the Government's press department, Dr. Funk. After paying a tribute to the Chancellor, Dr. Funk declared that the election victory provided the basis for ridding Germany of the anarchy of the devastated parties and for the introduction of sweeping changes in Germany's public life as well as for the nation's rebirth.

Federal Policy.

Furthermore, the speaker declared the victory of the National Socialists had made possible the coordination of the federal policy

THREE MORE SHOCKS AT CALIFORNIA

THOUSANDS HOMELESS
IN COLD OPEN

DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT BETWEEN $30,000,000 AND $50,000,000

NEW YORK, TO-DAY.

THREE MORE EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS WERE EXPERIENCED IN SOUTH CALIFORNIA EARLY YESTERDAY MORNING, BRINGING THE TOTAL TO 35.

COLD AND EXPOSURE ARE ADDING TO THE HARDSHIPS OF THE THOUSANDS OF HOMELESS IN THE AFFECTED AREA, WHO SPENT THEIR SECOND SLEEPLESS NIGHT IN THE CHILLY OPEN AIR Huddled over camp fires. MANY ARE DEVELOPING PNEUMONIA AND MORE THAN 20 HAVE DIED OF FRIGID AND HEART FAILURE.

Relief units are working feverishly in the area, where 29 cities have been seriously damaged. The estimate of the damage is stated to be between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000. It is at present impossible to estimate the number of casualties, but 120 are known to be dead and 4,150 injured, many seriously.

The first shock was felt at 5.55 p.m. on Friday night, the centre of the quake being Long Beach, the famous pleasure resort, which has been practically wiped out and is blazing fiercely. Santa Anna, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Santa Barbara, Glendale, San Bernardino, San Diego, San Jacinto, Hemet, Hollywood, Watts, San Pedro, and Compton also felt the shocks, buildings being wrecked in all cities.

Martial law has been proclaimed, and United States naval marines and unemployed ex-Servicemen are aiding in relief work.—Reuter.

BIRD CRUELTY CHARGES

S.P.C.A. Prosecution
In Court.

450 BIRDS CROWDED INTO
ONE CAGE

Evidence that 450 birds were placed in one cage was given at the continued hearing of the charge of cruelty to birds against Chan Cham Cheun, of 7, Cochrane Street, and Chiu Kam, of 1, Cochrane Street, at the Police Court this morning.

The case was adjourned until 11.15 a.m. to-morrow.

Mr. D. L. Strellett, of Messrs. Brutton & Co., represented the first defendant, and Mr. T. P. K. Kemble, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, represented the second defendant.

Mr. Frederick Siemens was the first witness called. He said that he was employed by the Nord-Deutscher Lloyd Shipping Company. His Company was not responsible for any overcrowding of birds nor for any mortality among them. The birds were carried in the cages in which they were shipped and were not transferred to other cages by employees of his Company.

The approximate freight was $1 per cage, for cages of a standard size. This was not the freight for deck cargo generally, but was only for birds in cages. He stated that the mortality among birds had not been ascertained. So far as he knew no claims for injury or death among birds had been received by his Company.

Mr. P. J. O'Brien, Inspector for the S.P.C.A., stated that birds were shipped in wooden boxes 14 feet deep, 2 1/2 feet long and 1 1/2 feet wide. In these boxes 450 birds were shipped, which gave each bird 21 cubic inches of room.

The British Embassy made inquiry at the Foreign Office, which stated that it had no information but promised to investigate the matter.

ROUND THE WORLD IN A JUNK

Pirates And Storms
On China Coast.

AMERICAN ADVENTURERS
IN HONG KONG

Early thrills have befallen the adventurous crew of the American-owned Ningpo junk, "Shih Di Ping Shi," which left Shanghai last week en route to the United States. The party arrived here yesterday.

When a few miles from the estuary of the Yangtze they were fired upon by pirates who attempted to capture the boat. A favourable wind fortunately enabled the lighter craft to elude the pursuers.

The next night the tiny boat was almost wrecked in a heavy storm, while on Friday, when nearing Wagon, they were nearly run down by a tramp steamer, with which they collided.

The expedition is headed by Mr. John Blomsheld, a New Yorker, and consists in addition, of a crew of six, including a Chinese loadah. Mr. Blomsheld was deluged with applicants who wished to make the trip, 140 applications being received.

From Hong Kong, the adventurers will proceed towards the east, via the Philippine Islands, the Caroline Islands, the Marshall Islands, Hawaii, and from there to California.

A vivid picture of the havoc caused by the tragic gasometer explosion at Neunkirchen, in the Saar District, Germany, on February 10. Seventy people were killed and nearly 1,000 injured, and 50 houses were demolished. Fire added to the horror, and the flames were seen 30 miles away. A careless workman, lighting a cigarette near an adjoining petrol pump, caused the disaster.—(S. & G.)

GERMAN VIEW ON DISARMAMENT

Hitler Not Going To Geneva.

EQUALITY STATUS DEMAND

Berlin.

Chancellor Hitler will not go to Geneva for the Five-Power conversations aiming at a revival of the Disarmament Conference, according to authorized sources which point out that in view of the domestic situation the Chancellor's continued presence in Germany is indispensable.

Moreover, it is emphasized that the Geneva situation, which formed the chief topic in today's Cabinet Council, does not require the presence of the Chancellor or on any other leading Cabinet member because the Reich's attitude towards the questions at issue has been frequently and emphatically stated and is not any more subject to changes.

The press, in commenting on the Five-Power Parley, where Germany will probably be represented by permanent disarmament delegate Dr. Nadeln, voices the suspicion that these conversations are merely designed to postpone the recognition of Germany's status of equality in practice, and insists that the entire nation, irrespective of political creed, is behind the government in demanding the translation of the Five-Power agreement into practice.

"Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" declares that Germany would never consent to a preliminary disarmament convention practically perpetuating the present state of affairs but must insist on the discussion of a settlement of the fundamental issue, that is: the limitation of the effectiveness with the German army as the yardstick.

The journal adds that the problems of security and arbitration are of secondary importance and

They had then a lead of 203 runs.

FREE CITY IN DISPUTE WITH POLAND

Danzig Planes Fly Over Westerplatte.

CIVIC GUARD CALLED UP
IN DANZIG

Berlin, To-day.

A fresh Danzig-Polish incident is bitterly commented upon here.

The Polish Government has protested to the Danzig Senate against light aeroplanes from the Danzig Flying Club flying over Westerplatte and demanding prohibition of such procedure.

The Senate has refused to act, on the ground that Westerplatte is Danzig territory and that the planes have a perfect right to fly over the district.

Part of the Danzig civic guard formed of the inhabitants was called up last week to assist the police in the execution of its ordinary duties.

This was officially announced shortly after the Senate of the Free City had issued the following proclamation to the people of Danzig:

"The Polish Government has committed a grave breach of the law towards the Free City as it has without the consent of the High Commissioner of the League of Nations and in flagrant violation of the existing treaties landed a party of heavily armed men on the Westerplatte."

"The Senate and the High Commissioner have at once undertaken all necessary steps to parry this grave breach of the treaties."

"We expect from the population of Danzig that with its customary coolness it shall in this grave crisis maintain absolute order and peace and avoid all disturbances, the sole effect of which could be to damage the just cause of the Free City."—Reuter and Kuomin.

The Italian Cruiser Libia, which should have been relieved at Shanghai in the middle of last month, has been detained until the middle of May.

She will be relieved by the Italian Cruiser Quarto, now in service in Manila waters, and which is expected in Hong Kong on or about May 14, bound for Shanghai.

Herriot Likely To Lead French Debt Delegation

Paris.

Evidence that France expects to deal with the United States on war debts, regardless of the fact she did not pay the December 15 annuity, was seen to-day as high quarters indicated former Premier Edouard Herriot likely would head a debt delegation to the United States.

It was reported that President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt would consent to debt discussions with France without first requiring that France pay the defaulted annuity.

Herriot fell from the premiership over his insistence that France meet the obligation.

The present administration in Washington indicated no intention of dealing with foreign nations on war debts if they did not pay the December payment as obligated, this declaration of position obviously being aimed chiefly at France.

COOKERY FAIRY TALES

Once upon a time a bride's first cakes WERE as hard as iron, and her husband DID break a tooth on one of them.

There was once a mother who was heartily sick of cooking cabbage for her children, but she had to go on doing it because they loved it so.

Once upon a time a man made some mustard that was just right. Not too much, not too thin, not too thick!

"You stand aside, dear," said the young husband, "I love washing up after a good meal! By the way, that meal was better than any my mother ever prepared!"

Once upon a time, a newly-engaged girl told her man that she really couldn't cook at all, not even toast! When they were married, he found she had told the truth!

There was once a little girl of seven who made better cakes than her mother, and the lady admitted the fact!

"Can you manage a four-course meal?" a woman asked her new daily-help.

"Yes, mum!" answered the girl—and she COULD AND DID, without a single grumble and with NO mess!

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE'S NOTEBOOK

Aluminium frying pans should be "seasoned" by putting in a layer of salt and holding over the stove till very hot. Shake well over the whole surface, remove the salt, and wipe the pan thoroughly with soft paper.

Carved ivory can be cleaned by brushing well to remove dust and then treating with a paste made of lemon juice and precipitated whiteness. Rinse off in clean, warm water.

Glass jars in which the stopper has become jammed should be stood in warm water, to which hot water is added until it reaches the neck of the jar. Now put into much hotter water, and with a feather drip olive oil between neck and stopper. Allow to work in before tapping the stopper gently with a wooden spoon, when it should lift out quite easily.

Metal lace can be cleaned at home by covering thickly with dry calcined magnesite, rolling up, and leaving for three hours. Shake well and rub over with a soft muslin to brighten.

Scorch marks on woollen fabrics will sometimes disappear if they are rubbed with a cloth wrung out of hot water and dipped in glycerine. Avoid too much saturation or a "tide-mark" will be left.

Tiled floors in new houses often have a whitish appearance which is not removed by scrubbing. This is caused by lime in the tiles and setting, and will not disappear completely until all moisture is worked out. Meanwhile, the condition can be greatly improved by washing with vinegar and water and then using a reliable floor polish.

TESTING PRINTED CREPE-DE-CHINE.

Printed crepe-de-chine is always an excellent proposition to the woman who has to economise and look well at the same time; so many of the printed quality wash splendidly and if there is any doubt on this point—take a sample piece home and dip it into a cupful of boiling water.

Certain delicate blues are also coming into fashion and there will be a demand for beige again.

BRIGHTER BUTTONS

Buttons are very bright just now. You can buy them in steel, cut so that they have diamond-like facets sparkling when light catches them. Coloured bone ones are coming in too.

Children's buttons are being brightened up, one idea is to paint a teddy-bear's head or a flower on them. I hope the scheme catches on. Really tiny children will love buttons like that.—Reuter.

CAPELET STYLE CLIMAX

Change In Jacket Lines Predicted.

FOX-FUR BORDERS

Capelets may have sounded simple up to date, but begin to become intricate under the Lucien Lelong influence. They are made in plain dark lagoon to go with exclusive printed crepe de Chine frocks, a plain tone being chosen from the darkest one in the print, and there are velvet capelets which may show fox-fur borders. In fact, capelets of every type mark a trend for afternoon and evening gowns.

This trend is destined to bring about a change from the short and bloused jacket lines of past seasons. Lagoon short-elbow-capelets worn with these frocks frequently have slim wrap-over under-jackets which just reach the silhouette below the hips. This type of capelet jacket invariably has fur placed round the cape hem outline.

Collar-apes for evening wear mark a higher elbow level falling in perfect circumference from necklines. Little intricacies lurk beneath this apparently simple trend, pink and mastic narrow stripes being woven through black Duchesse satin and splay forth in a flat sun-ray effect. This is displayed on a black satin evening gown. A design in white pique shows a deep flat hemmed border over the upper arms and on the front which crosses to one side, where it fastens by a strap into a buckle. The pique is an unusual contrast to a dinner gown of black lace with high neck and short sleeves.

This shorter shaped capelet line is followed for a black and white spotted cotton gown with an organ-pleated frill of white edging, a new sequin styled fabric top, closely meshed and massed with gun-metal pellets resembling "shot".

These are all the simple varieties in cape styles, others being designed in vivid or subdued tonings like amethyst to go with orchid pink satin. Bright green velvet in one instance matches a broad green leaf motif next scarlet on a white ground. This cape is bordered with a line of osprey which bristles through the feathery fronds.

An identical trimming appears in brown, but round the neckline of a brown velvet cape model. Geranium red corduroy velvet takes yet another form with rolling sleeves and the back caught into the waist through the medium of long tie-lends that stream from a centre front bow fastening.

Great Figures In Iraq

Tribute To Lawrence Of Arabia.

"THE INDEPENDENT ARAB."

London. Iraq is now a fully independent Sovereign State, and a member of the League of Nations.

Behind this simple historical fact lies a great story. One day it will be written, perhaps, in the same way as Mrs. Garnett has tackled the tale of Pocahontas—as a "work of art."

Great figures will appear in it. The benign Sir Percy Cox; a brusque, incredibly efficient Colonel A. T. (now Sir Arnold) Wilson; a smiling, enigmatical and audacious Colonel T. E. Lawrence (now Air-craftman Shaw, R. A. F.); a tall, lean, tireless, profoundly knowing woman, Gertrude Bell—these are some of the chief characters. They are all first-rate material for a skilled writer. Three of them are still alive.

Background for this story is available from "The Independent Arab" by Major Sir Hubert Young, published recently. He rendered distinguished service himself in the Middle East and had his full share of adventures.

This book is a record of his experiences and a record of some aspects of His Majesty's Government's policy in that part of the world.

"He wore a pure white silk over-shirt and loose white pyjamas. Round his waist was a gold belt, in the front of which was a gold-hilted dagger in curved gold scabbard, given to him by King Hussein. Over his shoulders he wore a soft aba of sheep's wool, with a deep embroidered yoke of gold or silver thread.... Feisal himself could boast no more splendid raiment than was worn by his friend Lawrence.... Lawrence always wore sandals, kicking them off in proper Arab style when he came into a house or tent. His theory was that it was no good wearing Arab dress unless one not only wore the very best of everything but wore it as an Arab would wear it."

The author alludes to Lawrence's "passion of contempt for the Regular Army" and his attitude towards British generals as "a mixture of schoolboy cheek with an assumption of omniscience." But he pays a generous tribute to the force of Lawrence's personality.

"I have often been asked," he writes, "whether Lawrence could have done what he did if it had not been for his almost inexhaustible supply of golden 'guineas,' and I have always made the same answer. Lawrence could certainly not have done what he did without the gold, but no one else could have done it with ten times the amount."—Reuter.

This book is published by the Mercury Press, Shanghai and is the first written on the subject by a Chinese. It contains forewords by Messrs. Sun Fo (ex-president of the Executive Yuan), C. T. Wang (ex-Foreign Minister), C. C. Woo (former Minister to the U. S., and ex-Foreign Minister), Hu Han-Min (ex-President of the Legislative Yuan), Lo Wen-Kan (ex-Minister for Foreign Affairs), and Dr. Wellington Koo (Minister to France, and ex-Foreign Minister).

CHINESE VIEW ON MANCHURIA

Interesting Book By Journalist.

"ONE YEAR OF JAPAN-CHINA UNDECLARED WAR"

"One Year of the Japan-China Undeclared War," by Edward Bing-Shuey Lee, is welcome at this juncture, being a comprehensive historical record of events following the Japanese occupation of Manchuria.

The author is a well known Chinese journalist. As editor of the (Peking) Leader he angered the Japanese by his policy, and they made representations to the Chinese authorities which caused the paper to be suppressed. However, Mr. Lee is impartial in his statement of facts, and quotes from Japanese documents and official sources in his presentation of the Chinese point of view.

This book has been written after first-hand investigations were made by the author at a number of places affected by Japan's attack on China.

Mr. Lee gives an account of the steps already taken by the League and criticises the attitudes of the Powers, and the steps which they have taken to uphold the Pact of Paris and the Nine Power treaty. The future peace of the world depends on a speedy settlement of the Sino-Japanese question.

"One Year of the Japan-China Undeclared War" enables the man in the street to obtain a definite picture of the hostilities in the North. It is illustrated, containing numerous photographs and maps.

Admiral Campbell's Life Story

"MOSQUITO" FIGHT ON CHINA STATION

The life story of the famous war-time "Mystery V.C." Rear-Admiral Gordon Campbell, V.C., has been told at last, and told by himself.

"Number 13" is the title which Admiral Campbell has selected for his autobiography, published by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton, Ltd. (20s. net). And he explains the choice of this curious title in the first sentence of his book.

"I was born number thirteen out of a family of sixteen on January 6, 1886, at Upper Norwood."

It was in September, 1900, that he entered the old Britannia at Dartmouth as a naval cadet, and from that date he has stories almost without number to tell of senior officers and high officials of the Admiralty.

A Mosquito—Very Biting.

While serving as a junior officer on the China Station he was in very hot water. The admiral was sleeping aboard his ship, and young Campbell was officer of the middle watch.

"The Admiral rang his bell, and sent for me about two o'clock in the morning. He was in a very bad temper and wanted to know why the h— he had been bitten by a mosquito: he ordered me to make investigations and report in the morning. I made careful inquiries."

Later the captain of the ship asked Campbell what he intended doing about it and, says the Rear Admiral:

"I told him the only thing I could think of was to put the sentry under arrest for allowing the mosquito to enter the Admiral's cabin without his permission. This apparently satisfied the Admiral, for I heard no more about it."

Then coming to the war days Admiral Campbell has some really excellent stories to tell.

"Secrets" of the Town.

Of the secrecy which prevailed he tells the following:—"I was out on patrol duty one day when I got called into the Fort (at Plymouth) about 3 p.m. The Captain-in-Charge gave me instructions as to where I was to patrol at night as a certain ship was leaving harbour. 'I said, 'I suppose it is the So and So' and he said, 'I'm afraid I can't tell you, as it is too secret.' 'Well even if I had wanted to, I couldn't have communicated to any enemy as I was at sea. Anyhow, that night 'H.M.S. So and So' sailed and was cheered out of harbour by crowds of people on the shore front to give her a send off! 'It was the same when the flexible and invincible sailed for the Falklands under Admiral Sturdee, as it was common talk of the town where they were bound for and what time they were sailing; but it was all too secret to tell Commanding officers."

Admiral Campbell once and for all smashes the yarn that when as captain of a Q ship he dressed as a woman and carried a baby in his arms, the baby being a bomb, which he threw down the conning tower of a submarine.

"There is not an atom of truth in that yarn," he says, "though I still meet people who believe it."

And Another V.C.

Associated with Admiral Campbell in the "Q" ships was Lieut. C. G. Bonner, V.C., R.N.R. He was awarded the V.C. after the famous action in the Dunraven, but owing to secrecy he had not officially received it when about to go to sea again in command of a dangerous-looking "Q" ship.

Admiral Campbell feared he would never return to receive the decoration, so suggested to someone in authority it might be in order if the hero received the decoration immediately.

The result was that Lieutenant Bonner was sent for and invited to spend the week-end at York Cottage, with the King and Queen.

Unfortunately the hero had no idea that he was to be so greatly honoured, and went to Sandringham with only an attache case and his sword. He wrote to Admiral Campbell a long account of his visit, which is reproduced in "Number 13."

Lieutenant Bonner was ordered to catch the very next train to Sandringham. In his letter to his chief, he wrote:

"This rather staggered me and I explained I could not possibly go, having no clothes or luggage, and no time to get any. I started off, and I was met at the station by two huge men in green liveries, one of whom seized my despatch bag and sword and the other was most anxious to empty the guard's van to get out my heavy baggage."

At York Cottage, Lieutenant Bonner says, he was "Left with H.M., who was awfully nice. He gave me my V.C., asked a lot about you, and settled down to tell me some of his own sea experiences, until dinner-time."

On the following day, after dining with the King the previous evening, Lieut. Bonner went to church, walking with the King after the service.

"The King asked me to walk over with him to see Queen Alexandra at Sandringham House. Queen Alexandra patted me on the back, and I was asked to sign her autograph book. After that I walked back with His Majesty to York Cottage, and after lunch said good-bye to them all."

"In spite of the humorous side of the yarn," says Admiral Campbell, "I know that Bonner felt that the King, by doing him so much honour, was expressing his high appreciation of the wonderful service of the officers of the R.N.R. during the Great War."

Ordered To Return I.S. 3D.

Admiral Campbell tells of the Admiral's economy during the war when the nation was spending nine millions a day.

He was ordered to London from Queenstown to attend a conference, and he told his secretary to wire from Holyhead for a sleeping compartment to be reserved for him on the train.

The secretary sent the telegram

"O.H.M.S." After the conference—at which, incidentally, nothing useful happened—he returned to Queenstown, and a few weeks later received a letter from the Admiralty ordering him immediately to remit one shilling and three-pence, the cost of the telegram, which should not have been sent "O.H.M.S."

The money was duly sent, and he insisted upon a receipt being given him.

Plots To Kill Him.

During the war there were numerous rumours of plots against his wife—plots which, he contends, resulted from the fact that he was known as the "Mystery V.C." and the Germans believed that he was the person responsible for something quite different from the deed for which he received the decoration.

He was stationed at Holyhead when an attempt was made to kill him.

"I was late going ashore," he says. "As the boat was approaching the pier a little boy hailed it and asked the crew to pick up his dropped fishing line. The boat stopped, and the two men in the bows started to haul in a piece of wood with a fishing line attached to it."

"At the end of the line was a bomb which exploded in the boat, hurting one man's hand very severely, another man less seriously, and doing a certain amount of damage."

"The boy, who had a Russian name, stated, on being questioned, that a strange man had come down and thrown this thing into the water, had then given him a shilling, and told him when the steamboat came in he was to ask the officer, who would be standing in the stern, to haul the line out of the water."

"I at once communicated with the Secret Service, who took the matter in hand, but to this day I have never heard the whole truth."

A Roosevelt Visit.

He has a good story to tell of a visit paid by the First Lord of the Admiralty (Sir Eric Geddes) and Secretary of the U. S. Navy, Roosevelt (now President of the U.S.) to the fleet at Queenstown.

Admiral Campbell was then captain of H. M. S. Patrol. Sir Eric and Mr. Roosevelt were on board.

THE LAST MR. MUDIE PASSES.

Line Of Famous London Librarians.

London:

The last survivor of the original "Mudie's Library," which has supplied several generations of Londoners with their reading-matter, has passed with the death of Mr. Alfred Mudie at the age of 89 years.

It was in 1840 that another member of the family, Mr. C. E. Mudie, son of a bookseller, set up in premises in Bloomsbury and developed his father's plan of lending books at a penny a volume.

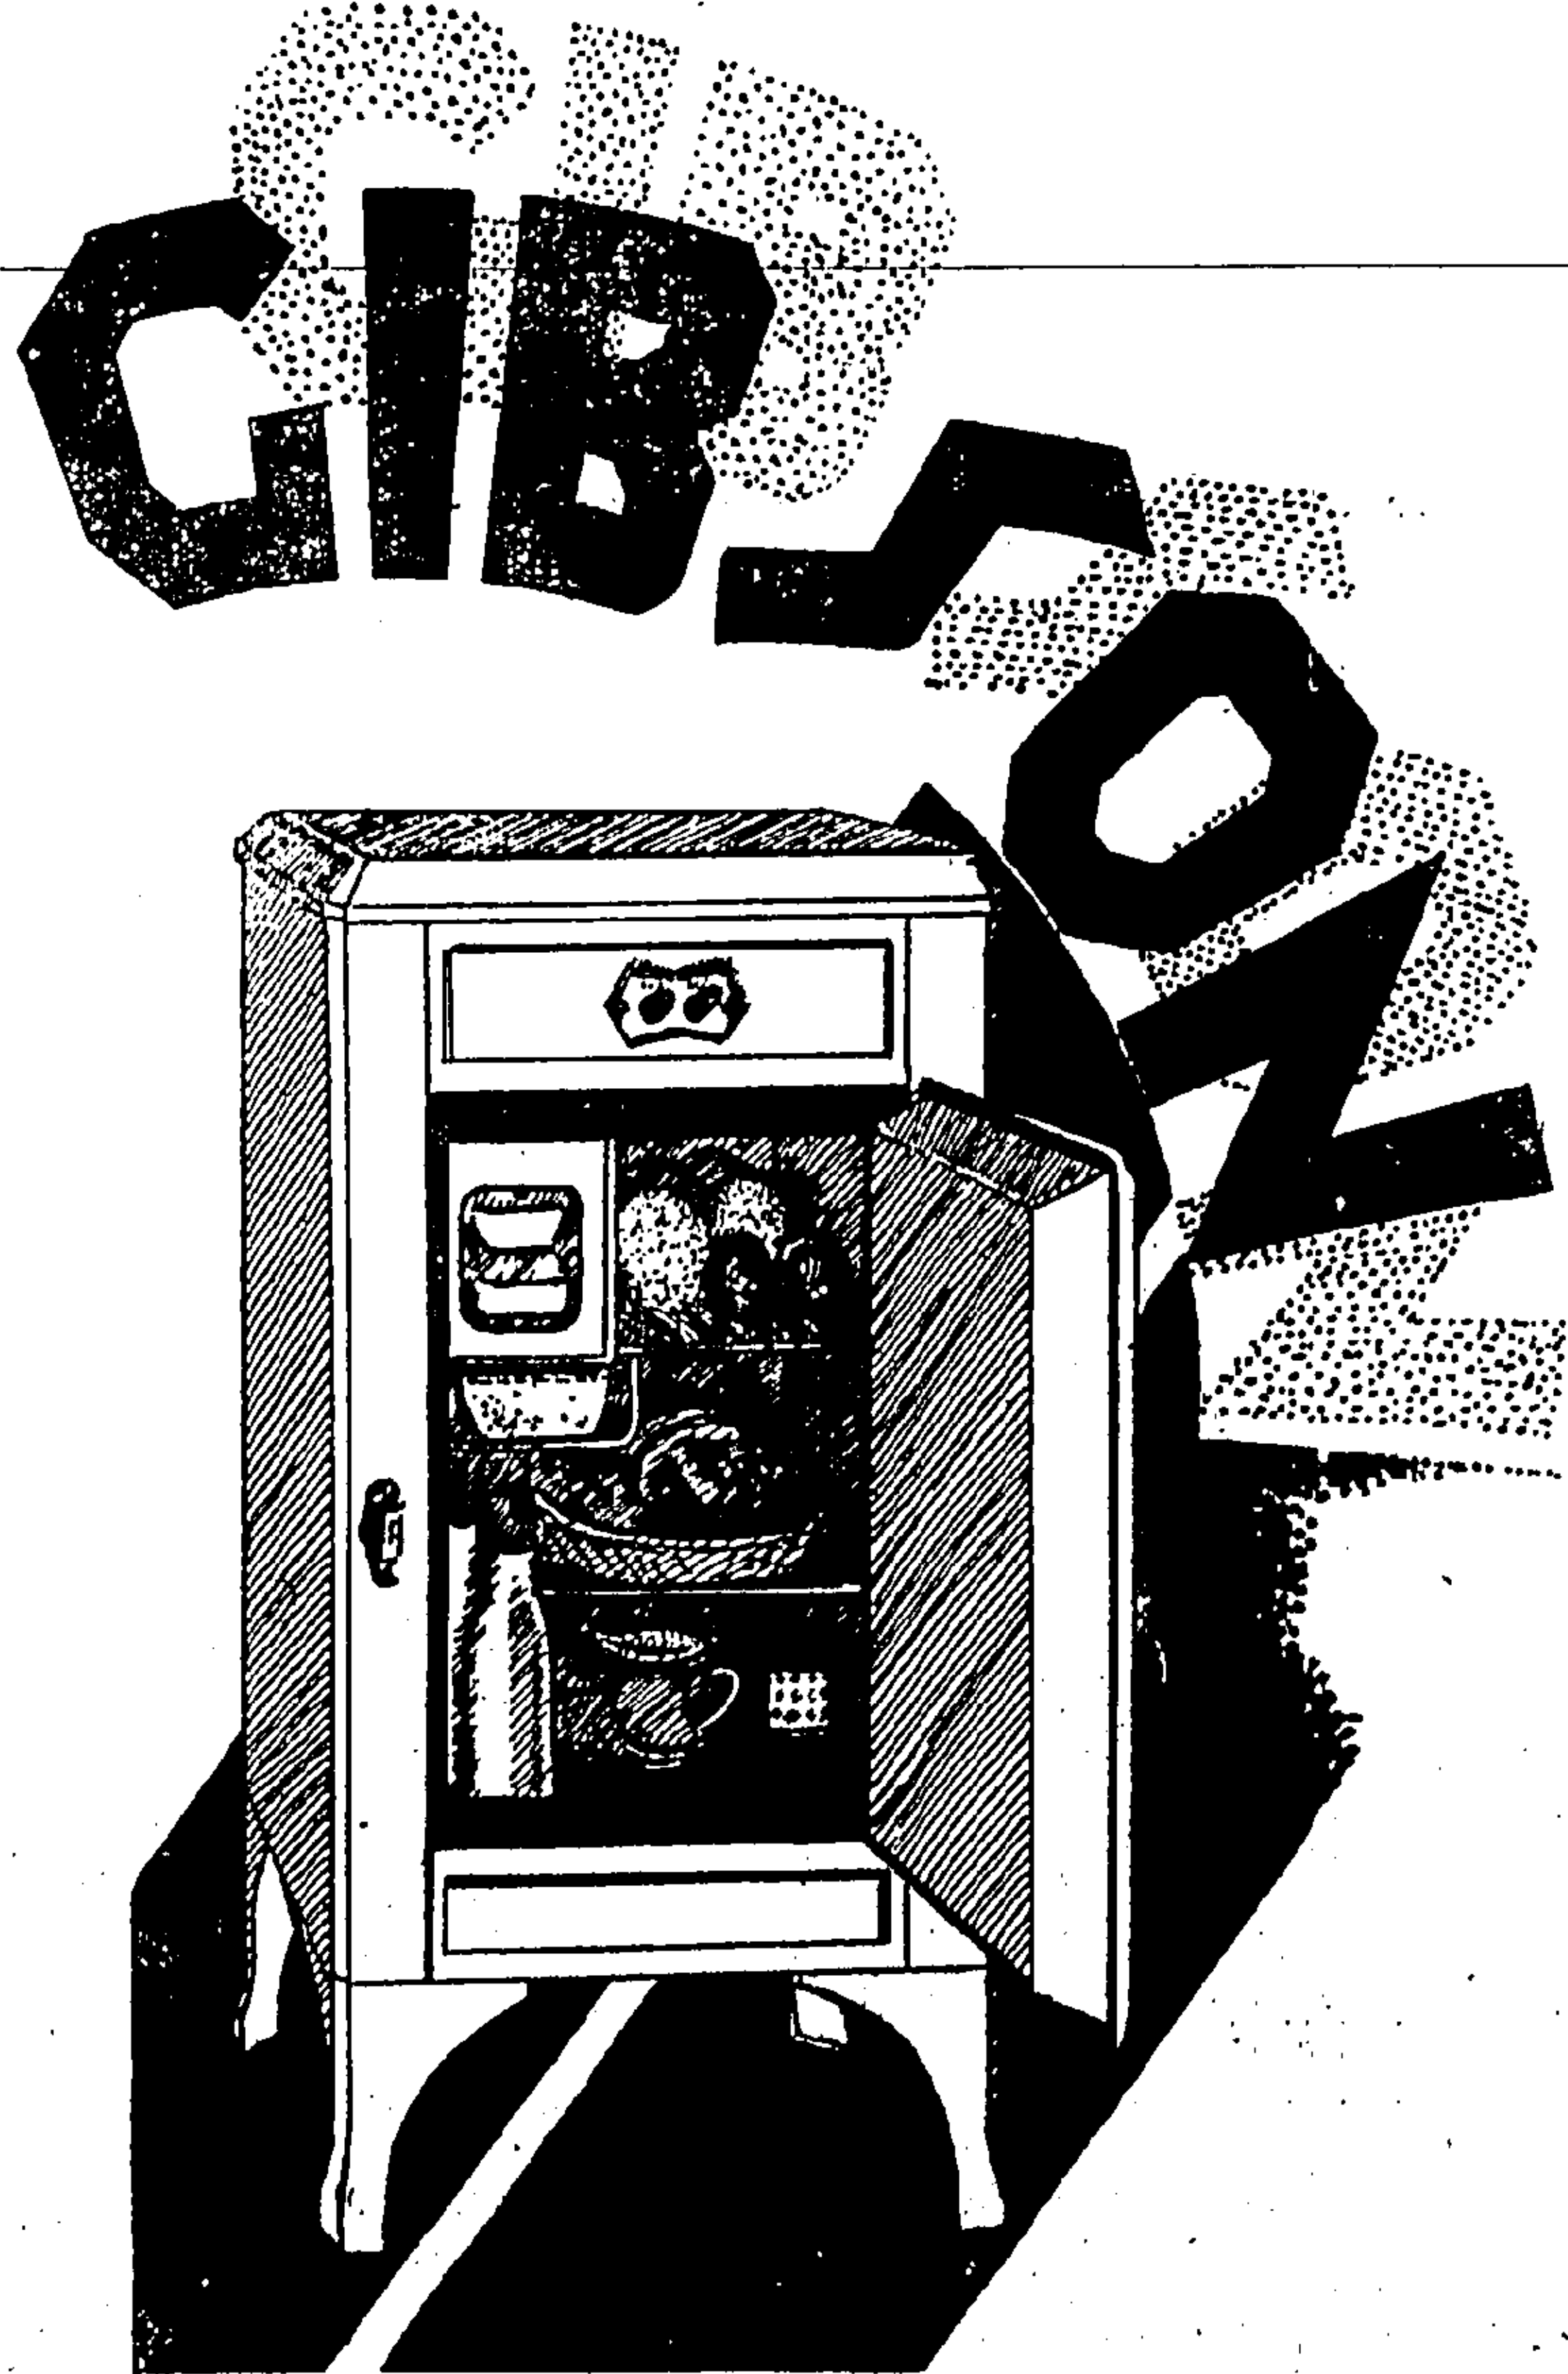

Both Mr. Alfred and Mr. C. E. Mudie were devout church-goers, and it was the latter who inserted the word "Select" in the title of the library and pursued the policy of limiting the range of books which customers might obtain.—Reuter.

Sir Eric and Mr. Roosevelt decided to dine aboard the Patrol one night. It was rather difficult for the captain, since the accommodation was limited, but the First Lord was insistent.

Says Admiral Campbell: "I wondered whether the fact that U.S.S. Kimberly and Admiral Bayly's house were both dry had anything to do with the necessity of dining aboard the Patrol; private inquiries rather strengthened this idea, so I took the precaution of sending a lieutenant on duty to Cork to purchase some champagne, and I was able to give the party a first-class dinner, of which Mr. Roosevelt reminded me when I had the honour of dining with him as Governor of New York State; so I was able to tell him the secret history of the dinner party."

The book is delightfully written in typically easy sailor style, and crammed with splendid stories.

"THE LASH"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

Richard Barthelmess in "The Lash," in which he gives one of his greatest portrayals, is the current attraction at the Queen's Theatre. In this picture Barthelmess is cast as Don Francisco Delino, hard-riding, hard-fighting and fearless vaquero of the lawless days in California following the ceding of that now great state to America by Mexico.

Thrills follow fast, not unmixed with mirth, and the rough road of several loves is "travelled" before the surprising climax which seldom fails to stir an audience to wild enthusiasm arrives. The hero's sweetheart is played by beautiful Mary Astor while Marian Nixon is cast as his sister. Barbara Bedford, is seen as a Mexican dancer.

MAIL REVIEW.

"IF I HAD A MILLION"—KING'S THEATRE.

Novelty is the keynote of "If I Had A Million" at the King's Theatre. For a conventionally embittered millionaire concludes that his fawning relatives shall not share his fortune; it shall go, a million at a time, to eight unknowns picked from the city rectory. Richard Bennett, Charles Ruggles and Charles Laughton are excellent.

The blithe finale of the piece, with millionaire looking forward to many happy, presumably money-making years, may be satire.

MAIL REVIEW

MATA HARI—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

Exotic and highly entertaining, Mata Hari, the current attraction at the Oriental Theatre, pictures the great Garbo at her best in a glittering melodrama based on the exploits of the notorious Javanese woman spy.

Greta Garbo gives a performance which ranks with the finest and most genuine portrayals in screen history.

SHEPHERDS LIVE THE LONGEST

158 Centenarians In Bulgaria.

THIRD IN WORLD'S AGED

Shepherds live the longest lives in Bulgaria where they make up almost half of the country's 158 centenarians.

The Bulgarian shepherd lives roughly and frugally. When a child he wears few clothes, even in the winter. But as he grows up he adopts a thick sheepskin jacket and a fur cap which he wears through heat and cold.

The recent study of centenarians here reveals that Bulgaria holds third place for this record among the countries of the world. Lithuania is first and Portugal second.

The total number of centenarians here is made up of 85 men and 73 women. By occupation they are:—

69 shepherds, 48 agricultural labourers, 18 artisans and servants, 15 housewives, 3 blacksmiths, 2 dressmakers, 2 gardeners and 1 beggar.

Most of them are vegetarians and non-smokers.—Reuter.

DRAMATIC ESCAPES.

FROM FIRE.

Inhabitants Flee From Burning Island.

An entire island in the River Una, near Bihac, was like one huge bonfire lighting up the snow-clad hills around when 20 water-mills on it were burned down.

The wooden bridge leading from the island to the mainland also caught fire, and many of the inhabitants had to save themselves by plunging into the rapid waters of the Una and swimming across, despite the danger from swirling ice floes.

Others dashed across the blazing bridge, or saved themselves in boats.—Reuter.

MAIL REVIEW

"THE FLAG LIUTENANT"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

"The Flag Lieutenant," the current attraction at the Central Theatre, is recommended as one of the best British films seen in Hong Kong for some time.

A strong cast headed by Henry Edwards, who took the original role in the silent version, and Anna Neagle of "Goodnight Vienna" fame, makes this picture one to be remembered.

Made with the co-operation of the British Admiralty, this British and Dominion film is full of good, clean action set against a colourful naval background. Its mixture of romance, adventure and comedy will be keenly appreciated by those who see this excellent film.

Conditions Of Recovery.

The annual speeches of the leading British bankers, delivered at the various London bank meetings held recently, have shown this year a more than usually close approach to unanimity on the main economic questions of the day. Perhaps the experiences and experiments of the past year have contributed to it; but for some time past it has been clear to those who are in constant contact with expert banking and business opinion that there is no fundamental difference about the cause and the cure of economic depression. There has never, for instance, been any important divergence of opinion among bankers over the impossibility of transferring enormous sums from one country to another in respect of reparations and inter-Allied War debts—in a world so heavily fortified by tariff walls as to render even ordinary reciprocal commercial payments difficult, let alone vast one-way payments such as War debts. Year after year they have endeavoured to show that the supply of monetary gold was insufficient to discharge the payments, and that default must sooner or later take place unless the creditor countries were prepared to make a settlement on the Lausanne model. This situation the bankers have endeavoured to illuminate in their inevitable comments on the subject of the American debt, and Mr. Rupert Beckett (Westminster) deserves special attention for his statement that "the situation with regard to War debts has been improved recently by the American invitation to this country to send a delegation in order to begin discussion on this subject early in March, when the new President takes office. The resultant saving of time is of great importance. The affair is therefore now to some extent sub judice, and I must speak of the matter with restraint and without provocation." The past year has been one of the leanest periods that the banking community have known for a very long time, but, lean as 1932 was, 1933 is likely to be leaner still. Not since the nineties have money rates been so unremunerative as at present, and, in the absence of a revived demand for money for trade purposes, the present low rates are likely to continue. Soon after Britain departed from the gold standard the Government, partly to meet the view that an attempt at least should be made to see whether trade could be stimulated by an expansion of credit, enlarged the monetary basis, with the result that banking deposits to-day are larger than they have ever been in the history of this country. But as Mr. Reumont Pease (Lloyds) and Mr. Beckett have pointed out, the expansion of credit has not only failed to increase the amount of money employed in trade—it actually shows a considerable decrease—but it has also failed to lift commodity prices. Mr. Beckett declared that relation in America—by which is meant an expansion of credit with the object of raising commodity prices—had failed also. Mr. Pease said much the same thing. Indeed that is clearly the opinion of the majority of bankers, though Mr. McKenna, who is always interesting, takes a different view. Similarly on the problem of restoring world trade bankers as a whole believe that there are limits to what can be achieved by purely domestic action. All of them have expressed appreciation of what has been achieved by the National Government in the past year in bringing about a rehabilitation of the country's financial position. Traditionally the City believes in free trade, but without exception the bankers have approved the Government's tariff policy. At the same time most, if not all, of them endorse the view expressed by Mr. Beckett and Mr. Goodenough (Barclay's) that the British tariff should be used primarily to obtain by agreement the lowering of tariff barriers all round. "The erection of these obstacles," as Mr. Beckett observed, "to the passage of international commerce is to no small extent responsible for the deepening of the world depression." Financial opinion seems generally to hold also that the breakdown of the gold standard is primarily an effect rather than a cause of the world's troubles. Mr. Paton (Martin's) faithfully interpreted this opinion in saying "that the world's troubles will not be solved by approaching them as if they were due to the gold standard, or as if they could be cured by monetary action alone. As he pointed out, discussion as to the advantages or disadvantages of gold as a monetary standard must tend to be fruitless until the international problems which have brought about the present crisis have found a solution. In the view of Sir Harry Goschen (National Provincial) almost all the underlying causes of the present depression are really political. "If at the forthcoming conference," he said, "the nations of Europe will agree to renounce the same excessive nationalism that makes them choke the channel of international trade and impoverish themselves in the pursuit of economic self-sufficiency, then the world may be blessed with a revival of hope and confidence." Such a revival, he added, would soon produce that rise in commodity prices that is essential to the recovery of the world's economy.

and
EVERYWHERE*UNIVERSAL CELEBRITIES.

Sinclair Lewis, in his new novel, "Ann Vickers," points out the obvious fact that there are celebrities and celebrities: those whose reputation is local and those whose reputation is world-wide.

In 1932, he says, there were in all the world only fourteen persons universally known: Colonel Lindbergh, G. B. Shaw, the Prince of Wales, the ex-Kaiser, Freud, Einstein, Hitler, Mussolini, Gandhi, Hindenburg, Greta Garbo, Stalin, Henry Ford and, "most of all," Al Capone.

It is easier to subtract from this list than to add to it, except that it should certainly have included Charlie Chaplin and omitted Freud and Al Capone, who by 1932 was well in the shadows. Presumably he is one of the five who out of these fourteen "will be forgotten," says Mr. Lewis, "by 1935."

Only One Woman.

Analysing Sinclair Lewis's list, it is found that the universal celebrities distributed among the nations thus: Germany 4, America 3, England 2 (if Mr. Shaw is English), India, Sweden, Italy, Russia and Austria 1 each. (Hitler, though born just over the Austrian border, is for this purpose ranked as a German.)

There is but one woman. These are the occupations of the great: Royalties, men of science, dictators and agitators two each (Gandhi, of course, is an agitator; Hitler, as yet, is little more); one man of letters, one airman, one film star, one industrialist, one gangster, one president.

It is up to the elder statesmen, poets, painters, musicians, actors, tinkers, tailors, soldiers and sailors to issue their counterblast.

AMERICA'S PROBLEM OF EMPLOYMENT
ARMY OF HOMELESS
WANDERERS*"NOMADS OF DEPRESSION"

The great army of homeless families and boys—victims of the economic upheaval—that is roaming over the United States, is creating an increasingly difficult problem which deeply concerns social agencies in all parts of the country. The extent of the problem and the measures recommended to meet it are recorded in the following article. Mr. Baker is chairman of the American Welfare and Relief Organization.

By NEWTON D. BAKER.

A curious social phenomenon has developed out of the present depression. All over the country hordes of young people and entire families are found wandering their way along the highways and byways. They are the people whom our postoffices label "address unknown," and whom we call transients, lacking a more adequate term by which to describe them. Every group in society is represented in their ranks, from the college graduate to the child who has never seen the inside of a schoolhouse.

Expectant mothers, sick babies, young childless couples, grim-faced middle-aged dislodged from lifetime jobs—on they go, an index of insecurity, an unusual and amazing sight even in a country used to the unexpected. We think of the nomads of the desert—now we have the nomads of the depression.

At least 25,000 families in our country and more than 200,000 boys and young men are reported by the United States Children's Bureau and the National Association of Travelers' Aid Societies as recruits in the present transient army. Because of the difficulties which lie in the way of a "head-to-head" census, these figures are generally conceded as telling only a part of the story. The actual count, beyond doubt, is several times the reported figures. One thing we know positively: that in this army is gaining rapidly in numerical strength.

Many Boys Under 21.

One-quarter of the present transient army, we are told, is made up of boys ranging between 16 and 21 years of age. Girls flock to the city in numbers, but the desire to travel long miles across country has not as yet proved as contagious to them as it has to their brothers.

Russia's experience with her vagabond youth should prove a warning as they were called, came into being to us. The shelterless, or bezprizorni, after the overthrow of the Russian monarchy in 1917 and increased so rapidly that they were estimated in a few years' time to number from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 boys and girls. This army of children, many of them as young as 10 years, terrorized whole villages and cities and became known for their murders, robberies and other acts of violence. The "wild children of Russia" the press termed them.

The reasons which have made our transient youth take to the road seem mild in comparison with those which caused the Russian children's exodus.

America's vagabonds, however, share this quality in common with Russia's wild children: having tasted the poison of a wandering life they find it difficult to give it up.

It is impossible to travel across any country, to live in box cars or "jungles," as the camp sites near the railroad yards are called, or even in municipal shelters, without meeting men whose influence is destructive. All too easily impressionable young people thrown into these environments without home guidance or direction pick up the vices and crimes of the underworld—gambling, stealing, drug addiction, prostitution and sexual perversion.

The philosophy of "no work" cannot but appeal to many of these young people who are untrained and to whom even in good times only dull, monotonous and dead-end jobs are available.

Hazards to Health

The health hazards of the road are also many for the transient. Often he arrives in town "sick from exposure or lack of food. Last winter in one Western city thirty-five men and boys were removed from box cars seriously ill, some in advanced stages of pneumonia. One railroad alone reported fifty men and boys killed and more than 100 crippled along its route. Hospitals treat the transient only if he is seriously ill.

The drifting family in our country about whom we hear so much less than the transient youth has but one reason generally for its vagabondage, and that is the loss of a job by its breadwinner. Unable to find work or to continue the rent or payments on the home, the family piles itself into the old car and takes to the highway.

Human nature is such that almost any one will give a handout once with some little grace, but continuous handouts day after day are often not so generously bestowed. So we have the family making its way as best it can, looking for the elusive job, the unexpected stroke of luck or the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, and as a rule ending its pilgrimage in some remote spot miles away from the starting place, miserable and destitute.

The children of these families perhaps suffer most of all. They are dazed, bewildered bits of humanity driven from town to town by a strange force called a "depression," which has upset the stability of their past and is dangerously threatening the safety of their future.

Workshops and work camps, either local or State, are suggested as effective methods for the care and training both of youthful transients and those who have been so long on the road as to have lost their habits of work. Where no work is available, it is recommended that relief be furnished as well as opportunity for training, study and other directed activities. Each community is requested to make every effort to provide for its own unattached, single citizens as well as families.

Citizen Co-operation

Citizens are asked to co-operate in solving this problem by directing those who apply to them for aid to a designated social agency or to a central bureau for transients if one has been set up.

Believing that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, social service leaders are urging schools, churches and welfare organizations to develop projects within their communities to hold the interest of those who are seriously affected by the depression and so keep them from the disillusioning and demoralizing experiences of the road.

Every existing constructive community facility should be in active service at this time. School curricula should be enlarged, trade courses made available wherever possible and public buildings thrown open to community groups in the evening for recreational and training activities.

FAIRY TALES POPULAR IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Children Tired Of Technical Books.

PROTEST MEETING IN MOSCOW.

Riga.
All the charming fairy folk who appear in the stories which children of every nation love are to come back to their own—back from banishment—in Soviet Russia.

Children are tired of reading about tractors and factories and about politics, electricity and collective farms.

Children themselves expressed their likes and dislikes very forcibly when they held a "protest meeting" in the Moscow House of Writers.

They complained about the flood of children's books, about industry and machines. Not one of them could remember having read a book he had enjoyed on these subjects.

"I read something about iron ore once," said one boy, "but I cannot remember anything about it now."

Travel books, especially Robinson Crusoe, were general favourites. So was Uncle Tom's Cabin.

The boy who summed up the debate said:

"Comrades, I must say we do like fairy tales. Let them give us fairy tales. We will ask too for Krylov's Fables should be sold for us."

Ever since the Soviet Revolution, the fairy tale has been frowned upon. It has been thought that it would be a friend to superstition, and an enemy to atheist propaganda.

Now, however, a more liberal outlook is being held in certain quarters.

Madame Krupskaya, Lenin's widow, for instance, argues in favour of allowing children to read certain fairy tales in the "Literary Gazette."

"Human beings," she writes, "have disappeared from the pages of children's book... The majority of authors of child literature evade a whole series of difficult problems and prefer to talk only about tractors and machines."—Reuter.

Crown Silk Store As Defendant.

The Crown Silk Store of No. 1, On Lan Street was the defendant in a case brought by Kalwant Singh, registered moneylender, before Mr. Justice Wood, the Puisne Judge, this morning.

The plaintiff claimed two sums of $1,000 each from the defendants, on two promissory notes dated January 1, 1932 and February 10, 1932, made payable on demand.

The plaintiff in bringing his case to Court has waived aside all amounts due on interest.

The case is proceeding.

BEGGAR WHO OWNED BLOCK OF FLATS.

States "Times Are Bad
For Landlords."

Marseilles.
A 60-year-old man charged for the eighteenth time with begging in the streets of Marseilles was found by the police to be the owner of a four storey block of flats and of numerous automatic machines which he had installed in several bars.

Defending himself the man stated that, although he might seem a rich man, times were very bad even for landlords as rents were in arrears and taxes were heavy. What he earned in begging he used, he said, to pay his taxes.

The Judge sentencing him to eight months imprisonment, remarked that during eight months he would be free from worries. "On the contrary," he replied, "my tenants will take advantage of this."—Reuter.

QUEEN'S DILEMMA AT BALL.

Centenarian's Quaint Reminiscences.

Cologne.
Who was the Queen who had to retire from a ball because her stockings came down?

Frau August Jacobi, Cologne's oldest inhabitant, told a local journalist that the royal lady was Queen Marie, wife of the blind King George V. of Hanover. She herself was a witness of the incident.

Frau Jacobi, a tradesman's widow living in humble circumstances in Cologne, will celebrate her 100th birthday next May.

When a young woman she attended a public ball at Hanover at which the King and Queen were present. The Queen was just about to open the ball by dancing with a partner when, to her dismay, she discovered that the criss-cross ribbons which should have held up her stockings were not functioning. Her Majesty was compelled to retire in haste for repairs.

Frau Jacobi happened to be standing immediately behind the Queen. Her Majesty requested her to dance in her place.

Naturally, the old lady is very proud to this day that she was once called upon to open a ball as "understudy" for a Queen.—Reuter.

Large Scale Operations Inevitable.

Peiping, Yesterday.
To-day's events exploded here like a bombshell. Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, by taking Command and putting his own troops in the field, casts the die and large scale operations in this area are inevitable.

Meanwhile, the Young Marshal has become a private citizen. A spokesman states that: Chang Hauch-liang will leave Peiping in a few days time and will probably proceed to Shanghai, then abroad.

It is learned that when Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the Young Marshal met in conference yesterday, the Marshal offered two suggestions.

Firstly, he relinquish his post, but take personal command of his sixteen Brigades in the field in an endeavour to re-take Chengteh.

Secondly, resign from his post and from command of the North-Eastern Army and handing over the entire responsibility to the Central Government.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek accepted the second proposal and after to-night the young man on whom big responsibilities have rest for a long time, assumes the title of an Marshal.—Reuter.

Det. Sergeant O'Donovan who prosecuted, said the accused snatched the bag from Mrs. Ma the complainant, while she was walking down Breedy Path yesterday. He had not got very far before he was stopped by some people passing by at the time.

The bag contained a vanity case, two lipsticks and $9.55 in local currency, the total value amounted to $40.05.

The accused said he had picked up the bag after another Chinese had snatched it from the complainant, and then dropped it when the alarm was given.

His Worship sentenced the accused to three months' hard labour.

with that of the States, which had been up to now frequently at logger-heads, jeopardizing the nation's interests.

He concluded with the announcement that the National Government planned an extensive and thorough propaganda drive to enlighten the nation as to its aims and that all such work would be centralized.

The tendentious and misleading reports spread abroad on the recent developments in Germany have prompted the National Government to issue a warning to all foreign correspondents stationed in Germany, of whom several hurriedly departed in order to avoid expulsion.

The remainder, according to an official statement, gave the solemn undertaking to refrain in future from displaying any bias and ambiguities in their reports, whereupon the Government suspended their expulsion for two months, when the matter will be reconsidered.

Fewer Women Deputies.

Though the newly elected Reichstag is the largest since the war, it contains the smallest fraction of women deputies, whose number has shrunk to 30 as compared with over 60 in the first post-war Reichstag.

As the National Socialists are opposed to women playing a political role in public life, their parliamentary party does not include a single feminine member.

While working at the Peak Hospital yesterday, a Chinese coolie employed by Tak Lee Contractors, on a repair job, was seriously injured by a falling plank, sustaining injuries to the head. He was taken to the Government Civil Hospital for treatment.

To-Day's Short Story.

THE WICKEDNESS OF WANG-HI

By Rolf
Bennett.

WANG-HI was poor, poor even for a Chinese coolie, which is saying a great deal. In addition to his other troubles he had a wife and five children, all dependent on him for their livelihood and all resentful that the livelihood he provided was so very inadequate.

Sometimes, during the season, Wang-hi's wife worked in the paddy fields, but this increased rather than diminished Wang-hi's troubles. For then his wife would bitterly upbraid him, pointing out that before their marriage she had scarcely soiled her hands, having been hand-maid to the Lady Li-chang. And Wang-hi, knowing this to be true, would wring his hands and call upon his honourable ancestors to witness that his poverty was as distasteful to him as it was to his wife and family.

But each succeeding month saw Wang-hi become poorer and poorer. Things were very bad in the province of Kiang-si and labour was at a discount. Wang-hi could scarcely gain sufficient to keep his family from utter starvation, and each day his wife grew more and more resentful.

Then, one day, the news spread throughout the province that Tuang-ho, a wealthy young mandarin, had slain another man and had been condemned to death by the courts. It was most unfortunate for the young mandarin that the man he had slain had been even more important and wealthy than himself, otherwise he could have bribed the officials to let him off.

But under the circumstances this was impossible, because the dead man's relatives could easily out-bribe him. But there was still one way out, quite orthodox and in order, and Tuang-ho lost no time in taking advantage of it. He had a long talk with his secretary, and, at the conclusion, this worthy man set forth to find the poorest coolie in the province.

And in due course he came to the hovel which Wang-hi called "home." Wang-hi was not in when the secretary called, but to Mrs. Wang-hi he made known his business.

"I will inform my wholly despicable husband of your honourable suggestion," said Mrs. Wang-hi. "I have no doubt that he will most gladly accept it, for such an opportunity as that offered by your honour occurs only once in a lifetime."

The secretary departed after promising to call next day, and Mrs. Wang-hi awaited eagerly the coming of her husband. In the meantime she busied herself about the hovel, making it look as presentable as circumstances would permit. She even gathered flowers and arranged them tastefully about the one room, and when this was done she took the few remaining "cash" which should have lasted the week out and bought trepan for her husband's supper, a delicacy he had not tasted for many months.

When Wang-hi at last arrived, weary, dispirited and hungry, with not a solitary "cash" earned, he was amazed to see how altered, how clean—from a Chinese point of view—his home had become. Then he noticed the flowers, and, finally, the savoury smell of the cooking trepan assailed his nostrils.

"Oh, honourable one!" cried his wife, casting herself at his feet. "Great good fortune has overtaken us since you departed this morning." Wang-hi looked dazedly about him and passed a hand across his brow.

"Truly great changes have been wrought," he murmured. "And surely I smell the delightful odour of trepan?"

"Indeed you do, oh honourable and never-sufficiently-to-be-respected father of our children," answered his wife. "Have I not told you that great good fortune has befallen us?"

"Explain, most honourable of wives," said Wang-hi. "Has your father or some rich relative passed to his ancestors and left you his worldly goods?"

"No, no, it is better even than that," answered his wife. "It is you, yourself, who have done it. Yes, no other than the greatly-descended Wang-hi himself."

"But how? Explain, oh lovely flower of the lotus," said Wang-hi, and therein lied abominably, for his wife in no way resembled a lotus flower, but rather a shrunken walnut in its husk.

"When you have eaten," was the reply, and as Wang-hi subsided upon a pile of rags which did duty as cushions, his wife took the trepan from the fire of burning straw and set it before him.

"This is, indeed, a delight to my nostrils," said Wang-hi as he inhaled the delicious aroma. "My honourable ancestors must have taken pity upon the poverty of their totally unworthy descendant."

Wang-hi proceeded to eat the trepan with much relish, and while he was doing this his wife procured a cup of powerful stimulant obtained from fermented rice.

"Drink this," she said, "and offer praise to your exalted ancestors who have permitted this great good fortune to befall you."

Wang-hi drank, and then, having finished the trepan, demanded to know the source of this sudden wealth.

"Have I not told you, my honourable lord, that it is you who have done all this?" said his wife.

"If what have I done?" asked Wang-hi in bewilderment. "To-day I have not earned a single cash."

"There, most delightful and charming of men, you are wrong, though I, your unworthy, and utterly-to-be-despised wife, tell you so."

Poor Wang-hi grew each moment more mystified. Never, since their marriage, had his wife said him such flowery compliments; indeed, her mode of address was usually the very reverse of complimentary.

"Explain," he said again. "I do not understand. All this savours of magic."

SOUTH AFRICA AND AUSTRALIAJapan's Expected Challenge.

London, Mar. 1.

Thirty-three nations have challenged for the Davies Cup this year. Twenty-four nations are entered in the European Zone as against 28 last year.But the contests in this zone will be the more interesting if only for the reason that the challengers include Australia and South Africa—both absentees last year.Both countries also have considerably appreciated their standing in the past few months, Australia by the good showing of Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath against the American team; South Africa by their victories over the British touring team and the good play of M. Bertram, V. G. Kirby, N. G. Farquharson and C. J. Robbins.English circles hope that South Africa will include in their team for Wimbledon Mrs. Bobbie Heine
Miller and perhaps Mrs. Robbins, who is warmly remembered as Miss Billy Tapeccott.Both are strong centre-court favorites.Another strong challenge may be expected from Germany. This country, together with Italy, provided the two big sensations last year.Germany possesses the two most improved players in Europe. They are Baron Gottfried von Cramm, the present
German champion, and Daniel Prenn.In the tie between Germany and Great Britain, Prenn won both his singles beating F. J. Perry and H.
W. Austin; Von Cramm defeated Austin also. Germany therefore will have to be regarded very seriously this year. Her two men are veritable demons on their own courts—skilled-stroke-makers allied to an indomitable fighting spirit.Another team which is likely to be stronger than ever will be entered by Japan.Last season Jiro Satoh was regarded as Japan's leading player.
Twice in America he defeated Elsworth Vines and once H. W. Austin. Then, returning to Japan, he was deposed in the National Championship by a newcomer Ryo Suke-Nunoi, a 22 year old student in the Kobe Commercial College.Nunoi is tall for a Japanese. He is a gangling loose-limbed youth built rather on the lines of Elsworth Vines. His most formidable tennis weapons are a powerful forehand drive and a fine volleying game.In becoming Japanese champion, he beat Kuwahara, 1931 national champion and second member of the 1932 Davis Cup team; also he beat Jiro Satoh in a full-blooded five-set contest in the final round.Not since the famous team comprising Kikumaru and Shimidzu reached the Davis Cup challenge round against Tilden and Johnston in 1921 has Japan been able to produce more than one first-flight tennis star in any year.Japan therefore will be astonishingly formidable in the 1933 Davis Cup matches. Nunoi and Satoh are apparently capable of beating any other European challenger.Spain too must not be underestimated. E. Maser is a host in last Wimbledon.—Reuter.IRELAND

DAVY'S GREAT DROPPED GOAL

Belfast, Saturday.

AFTER leading by 7 pts. to nil
at half time Ireland beat Wales by a dropped goal, a penalty and a try (10 pts.) to a goal (5 pts.).A crowd of 30,000 were given an early thrill when Barnes, after a fine passing movement
touched down for an unconverted
try after quarter of an hour's play.
The Welsh defence was unsound, their tackling being weak and hesitant, while their forwards were being continually penalised for scrum infringements.E. O'D. Davy dropped a glorious goal to give Ireland a lead of 7 points to nil. They continued to attack strongly and after half an hour's play Siggins kicked a penalty goal.Wales, however, responded near the end when Bowcott, who was dropped from the match against Scotland, scored a great try which Jenkins converted.

Steers Sustains Serious Injuries.

MAY BE OUT OF GAME FOR SOMETIME

A friendly hockey match between the Medway and Suffolk played at King's Park on Saturday resulted in a draw of 2 goals all.

Tuttle in goal for the Suffolk played a splendid game and was responsible for keeping the score down. Abbott, who played in the right back position, also did well to stop the fast and hard hitting Medway forwards from getting into his charge.

The entire Medway forward line did well, Birchley and Tarr being outstanding. Savage was the best of the Suffolk's forwards, putting in some useful work on the right wing.

The first goal scored by the Medway came as the result of an effort by Wisdom. He cut through and passed to Allen, the latter swinging the ball across to Lewis who scored after a partial clearance by Tuttle.

From the bully-off play was transferred to the Medway goal, where a mistake by Whitley cost the Medway a goal, Savage running into the circle to score.

In the second half a serious collision between Steers, the Medway's and Navy Lower Deck's brilliant right half, with the left half of the Suffolk provided a regrettable incident in the second half. It was trying to get to the ball and was blinded by the sun.

He was carried off the field suffering from serious injuries to his nose, jaw and eyes, which will probably prevent him from playing for some time.

Birchley scored the Medway's second goal after a fine solo effort. The Medway held their lead for only a very short period, Abbott, switching over to the Suffolk's centre forward position scoring the equaliser just on time.

BEAT CRAIGENGOWER BY TWO WICKETS

LEE AND RIDE GIVE THE VARSITY FIFTH WIN

OMAR TAKES 8 FOR 43

(By Athole.)

MAGNIFICENT BOWLING by U. M. OMAR, a former Interporter, nearly robbed the University of a glorious opportunity of annexing the Cricket League Championship at the Valley yesterday. Bowling unchanged he took all eight wickets to fall for 43 runs, only the very fine batting of L. T. Ride giving the 'Varsity victory by 2 wickets when set 134 to win.

The University have now completed their League fixtures with a 3 points lead over the Indian R.C. holders, and everything now depends on the result of the game between the Kowloon Cricket Club and the Indians at the K.C.C. a week on Saturday. Should the R.C.C. win or draw the University will win the Championship, but if the I.R.C. win a tie for the honour will ensue.

CRAIGENGOWER took first use of the wicket, but were early in difficulties against the 'Varsity "shock" attack of Gosano and Lee, six wickets falling for only 44 runs.

Ernie Zimmermann, however, played a captain's innings, and, in partnership with Lam, added 44 for the 7th wicket, and 32 for the 8th with Hamson, before he stepped in front of a straight one from Gosano for 61, scored out of 120. He hit no fewer than ten boundaries.

Lee concluded the innings with the fine analysis of 6 for 23 which gave him a bag of 11 for 79 as the result of two consecutive days of League cricket.

Requiring 134 to win the under-graduates found Omar in irresistible form and had lost 7 wickets for 108 runs when Ride proceeded to use the long handle with great success. With A. T. Nomanbhoy sitting on the aplice in a most convincing manner and Ride hitting out with vigour the 'Varsity total crept up to 132 before Ride was given out for obstruction after scoring 60 out of 109. He played good forcing cricket, hitting eight boundaries and having a 5 to his credit.

With only two runs required to win and two wickets to fall the Varsity won as the result of four byes from R. Lee on the leg side.

Omar bowled exceptionally well for his 8 for 43. He took his last six wickets for only 24 runs.

EX-HAIPHONG TITLE HOLDER IN FINAL

SIRDAR RUMJAHN TO MEET A LEFT-HANDER

CASSUMBHOY'S CAREER

(By Ex-Interpreter.)

OUT of the competition in the Open Singles Championship of the Colony has emerged J. A. E. Cassumbhoj, undoubtedly the best local left-handed player. He now requires only to beat S. A. Rumjahn in the Final to reach the top of the tennis ladder. The new challenger is by no means a new aspirant for honours. He first featured in the tournament in 1925, but he has met with no marked success in the Singles until this season. On one occasion, however, he extended T. Honda, the Japanese champion, to five sets. Two years ago Cassumbhoj disappointed his supporters by losing in straight sets to M. K. Lo, and last year he did not show up promisingly, losing to his finalist opponent by 6-4, 6-4, despite leads of 4-1 in both sets.

Cassumbhoj has, however, re-deemed himself by his current success, and I am very delighted to see him in this advanced stage. He has shown fine match temperament, and, above all, appears to have overcome his nervousness. I doubt his abilities of winning against Lai Kwong Tsun, last year's Malaya finalist, and M. W. Lo, ex-champion of the Colony, on account of his nervousness, but newspaper articles, emphasizing his weakness, seem to have given him the impetus to eradicate this deficiency, so that he can now be classed as a seasoned tournament player.

Eventful Career.

It is not my intention to discuss the prospects of the finalists. This I shall do next week on the eve of the match, but I consider it not out of place now to give a brief resume of the new finalist's career. Cassumbhoj began playing tennis on hard courts at the age of 12. At 17 he entered the Championship, in which he has now competed for nearly ten years, but this is the first year that he has reached the semi-final and final of the Open Singles, and final of the Open Doubles, though in 1930 and 1931, he reached the semi-final and final respectively of the Open Doubles Championship in partnership with C. A. L. Rumjahn.

He has been a member of the Indian Recreation Club team for several years in the Senior Division of the Tennis League. Except for two brief periods elsewhere he has acquired all his experience locally. He spent a few months in Tientsin and a brief period in Haiphong in 1929 when he won the Singles Championship of that port.

Review Of Matches.

The two semi-finals in the Open Singles decided last week did not attract large crowds. The tie between Ho Ka Lau and S. A. Rumjahn, however, was interesting and played reached a good standard. What struck me most was the fine defence produced by both players, so that the struggle for points became very keen after the first set, which Rumjahn took easily. I consider Ho Ka Lau played even better than he did against E. C. Fincher in the previous round, as he adopted more enterprising tactics against which Rumjahn had to be alert both in anticipation and on his feet. Driving baseline exchanges and long rallies proved to be features of the match.

In contrast, the match between M. W. Lo and J. A. E. Cassumbhoj produced a tame struggle. In fact, the latter won with surprising ease, Cassumbhoj showed up to advantage, and, benefiting by Lo's inability to control his shots, he adopted an aggressive method throughout. His best stroke was the forehand drive with which he placed the balls near the side lines with astonishing accuracy.

"TIGER" DAULA (240 lbs.)

retained his unbeaten record in the Colony when he fought a draw with Tor Johnson (280 lbs.) in the wrestling fight for the heavyweight championship of the Orient at the Po Hing Theatre yesterday. Johnson is seen above. In the same programme Duke Zebisko (258 lbs.) was beaten by Mighty Fazel (272 lbs.).

South China Triumph

Cornwall Lose Friendly By 8 to 1.

"HAT TRICKS" FOR PAU AND TAM.

(By OUTSIDE LEFT.)

A friendly soccer game between H.M.S. Cornwall and South China was played at Caroline Hill yesterday, and resulted in an easy win for the latter by 8 goals to 1.

The Chinese were easily the better team and combined more effectively.

The Cornwall gave a game display against greater odds, their men being unaccustomed to the methods of the Chinese players, who did what they wanted with the ball.

Pau Ka-ping opened the scoring for South China in the first half with a fast grounder. Soon after he followed this goal with two more in the same manner to complete his "hat trick."

The Cornwall's forwards were never able to put the finishing touch to their attacks, and with the exception of one raid, when Moore went through in a solo effort to score, they were never really dangerous.

Just before the interval, Tam Kong-pak added South China's fourth goal.

In the second half the Chinese team had everything their own way, Tam Kong-pak completing his "hat trick."

South China:—Lam Thin-chai; Leung Yin-chai and Lau Mau; Leung Wing-chui, Wong Mel-chun (capt.) and Tong-kwan; Cheng Shui-hong, Tam Kong-pak, Pau Ka-ping, Leung Tat-wing and Leung Pun-hon.

Cornwall:—Botterill; Baker and Matthews; Allen, Donovan and Partridge; Rogers, Trew, Rowlands, Moore and Parsons.

NOW WHAT ABOUT MALARIA?

When it was discovered some thirty years ago that Malaria was spread by the mosquito, people believed that this disease would soon disappear if the mosquitos were destroyed.

Gradually, however, hope in this direction was abandoned, as in the last few years medical science has proved by experience that it will be practically impossible to destroy the mosquitos. Some hundreds of variations of anopheles species have been found, all of them having their own peculiarities as to breeding-places and propagation. Some of them only breed in stagnant water, others avoid it and use clear, cool mountain streams. Some breed in the axils of leaves, others in brackish sea-water.

It is true that much can be done locally but it is out of the question to destroy the mosquitos entirely as it had been hoped. Since this sad truth must be accepted, science again turns to the problem of the disease itself.

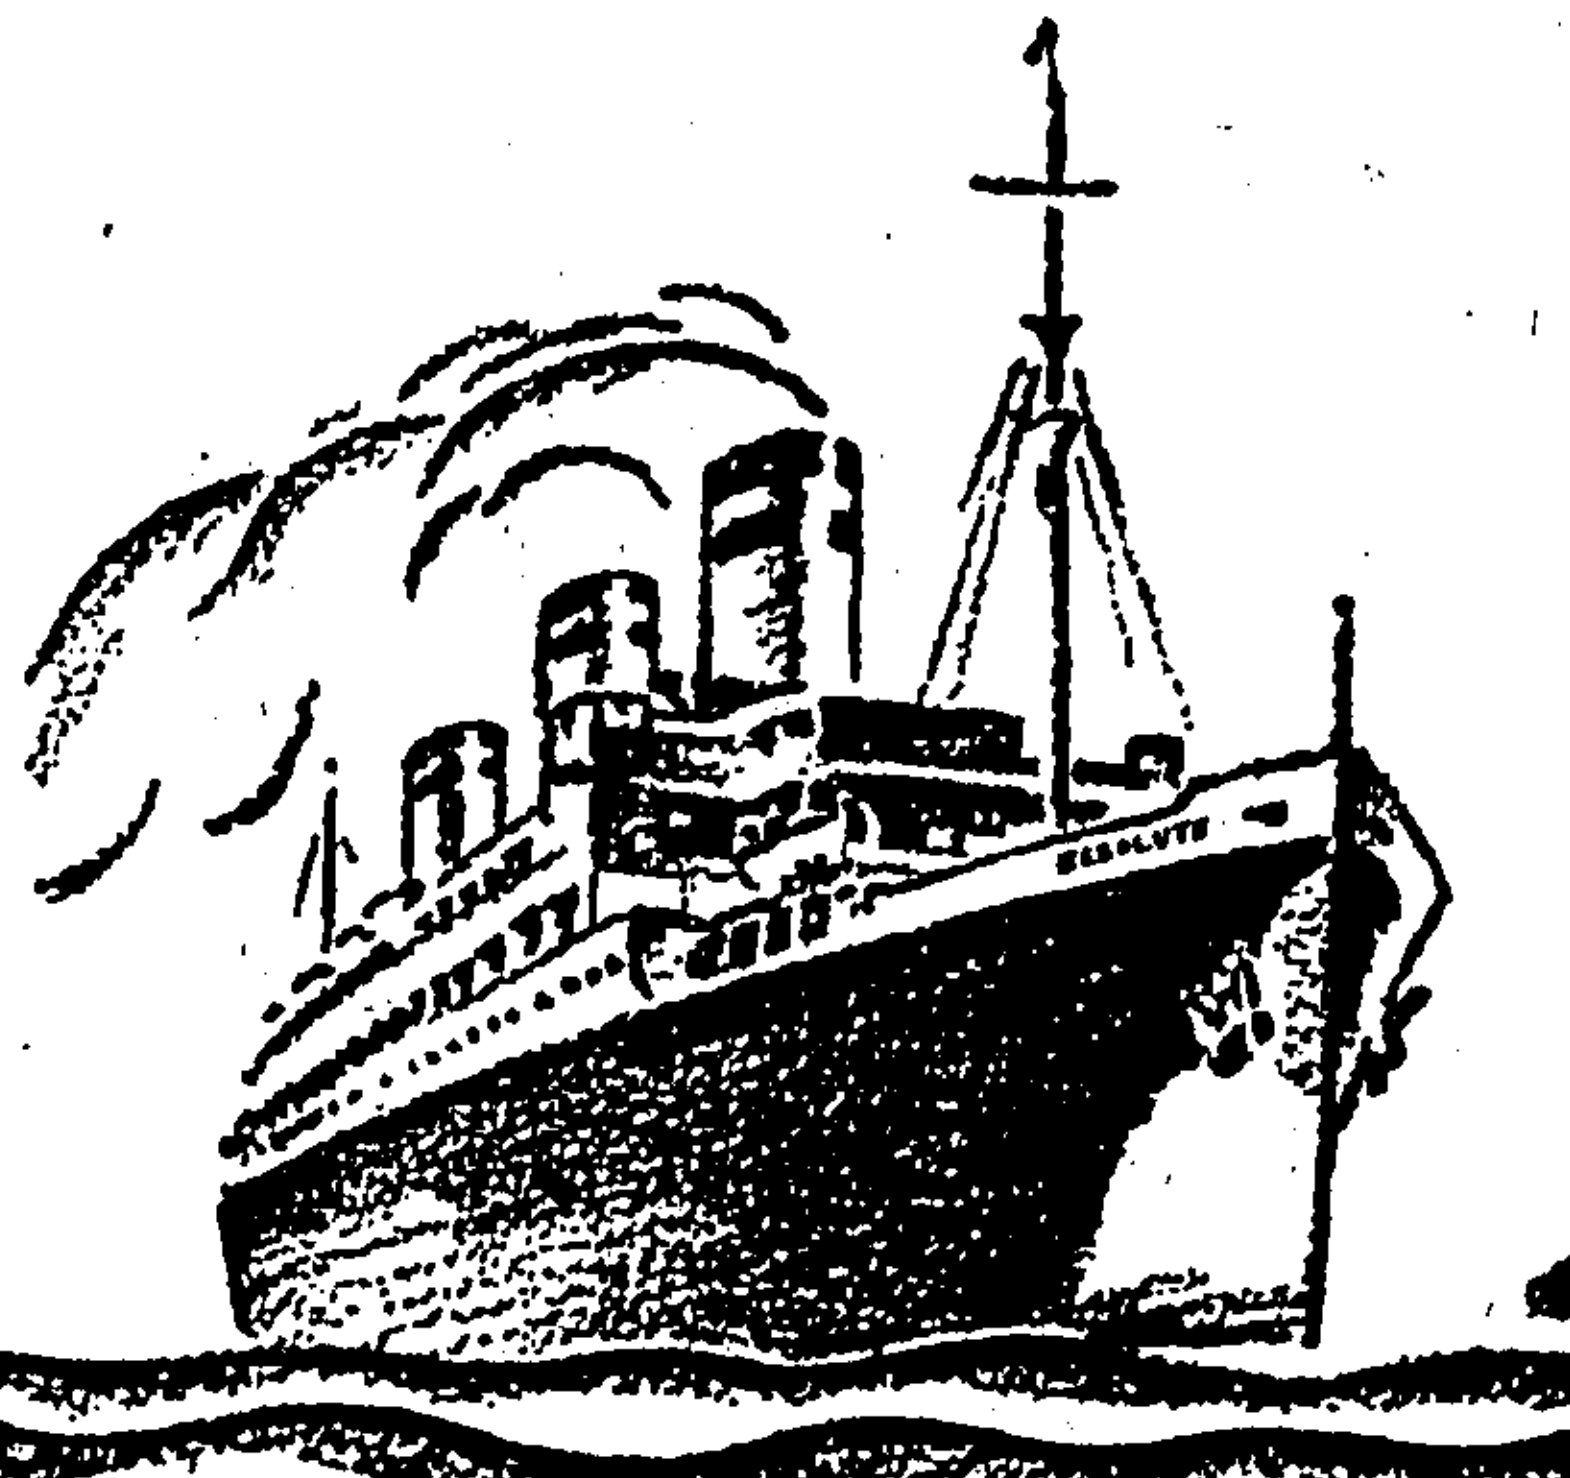

As it is impossible to stamp out malaria, it must be allowed to claim as few victims as possible. Most people know enough about the disease itself and its treatment with quinine once it has been contracted, but it has been proved again and again that it is not so much the disease which is dangerous as its after-effect—the so-called cachexy or weakness. During this state of cachexy the patient has no resistance to infection and is then open to the attack of many diseases.

It is, therefore, essential that more attention should be given in this country to the excellent remedies available—such as Sanatogen—which can be relied upon to rebuild lost strength within a very short time.

For it is very necessary that the body regains its strength quickly if new infection is to be resisted.

There is no doubt that we shall have to put up with the fact that malaria not only exists, but will remain for some time to come. In the meantime our watchword must be: Quinine and Sanatogen!

The Wickedness Of Wang-Hi

"Listen, then," answered his wife. "You have heard that the great and noble Tuang-ho is to be beheaded for slaying his friend?"

"I have heard such talk," replied Wang-hi, "but the affairs of the honourable and exalted great are no concern of mine."

"The very noble and praiseworthy Wang-hi must forgive the wretched creature who enjoys the altogether undeserved privilege of being his wife if she contradicts him. The affairs of the mighty Tuang-ho do greatly concern him."

"How so?" asked Wang-hi, who began to think he must be dreaming.

"Listen, oh favoured of the gods," answered his wife softly, at the same time nestling down at his feet that she might the better fan him. "A messenger came here to-day from the Lord Tuang-ho, seeking you."

"Seeking me?" Wang-hi sat up and rubbed his eyes.

"Yes, a grave and noble man, a mandarin of many buttons. And he sought the favour of speech with the honourable and widely esteemed Wang-hi."

"Fan me closer," said Wang-hi. "I have great need of air."

"And as I was saying," pursued his wife, obeying while she let the words fall from her lips like drops of honey, "it is your husband, who can confer a great favour upon the Lord Tuang-ho and his lofty ancestors."

"How?" demanded Wang-hi. "By a most easy and honourable service. One that will find merit in the eyes of your ancestors and will cause your family to cherish your delicious memory with—"

"Cherish my memory! What mean you?" broke in Wang-hi. "Am I dead that you should speak of my memory thus?"

"No, not yet, adorable of husbands," replied his wife hastily.

But Wang-hi was becoming impatient and a trifle suspicious, so he harshly bade his wife tell him what this remarkable service was that he could perform for the great and honourable Tuang-ho.

"Tell me in a word or I will beat you!" he cried, for the nice-spirit was affecting his usually sweet and gentle disposition.

"It is such a little thing, a mere trifling journey," answered his wife.

"All you need do is to accept from the munificent Tuang-ho one hundred silver taels."

"And then?" demanded Wang-hi, in whose mind a most disquieting suspicion was beginning to form.

"Then—oh—then you just allow yourself to be executed in place of the exalted Tuang-ho."

Wang-hi rose to his feet in wrath and, regretfully he said, smote his wife and called her evil names. And he said also that he would not suffer in place of the despicable and utterly worthless Tuang-ho for a hundred taels or a hundred thousand taels. He said many things of a like unworthy nature, and then flung himself down to sleep, for he was tired after his long day's search for work, and, besides, the potent rice-spirit had made his head ache.

When he awakened early next morning it was to find his five children kneeling by his side. Seeing that he was awake, they lifted up their voices with one accord:

"Oh most honourable and never-to-be-sufficiently-venerated father, we need badly a hundred taels. For months we have been hungry and have fed upon refuse that even the rats despised."

Wang-hi sprang to his feet, but ere he could make his escape, as was his intention, his eldest daughter had sunk upon her knees and thrown her arms about his legs.

"Do this little thing for us, honourable father, and we will venerate you as no ancestor has ever been venerated. Come, my father, think of the joy and comfort that will be ours when we receive the hundred taels."

But Wang-hi was still obdurate; in fact, he was incensed, and smote his daughter severely.

"Shame on you, Wang-hi!" cried his wife. "To refuse such a trifling thing as this is enough to make your noble ancestors turn in their honourable graves. What other man in all this province has a chance of earning one hundred taels, and that without so much as lifting a hand? I, a woman, scorn you, Wang-hi."

And she added the Chinese equivalents of "You great big lazy good-for-nothing—hulking—brute."

But still Wang-hi, the incredibly selfish, refused to part with his head for a hundred taels, and would have rushed out of the house but that again his family clung about his legs.

"Be a sportsman, father," was what they said in effect, but Wang-hi refused to be anything of the kind, and, thrusting them from him, at last made his escape. And, following his departure, there was wailing and gnashing of teeth in the house of Wang-hi.

Presently it occurred to the wife of Wang-hi that her husband might have intended all along to accept the offer made by the noble Tuang-ho, and had merely been acting in order to avoid a painful leave-taking. She grew more and more convinced that this must be the case, and even began to sing at the thought of all the things she would be able to buy with the hundred silver taels.

At mid-day the emissary of Tuang-ho arrived and inquired whether the honourable Wang-hi had agreed to accept his master's munificent offer of a hundred taels.

"Most exalted of men," replied the wife, "the unworthy and utterly despicable Wang-hi abuses himself in gratitude before the lordly Tuang-ho and begs to be permitted the honour of having his head chopped off."

"Good," said the emissary, "where is the most worthy and soon-to-be-glorified Wang-hi?"

"Wait and I will fetch him," answered the woman; but as she was about to leave the house an excited neighbour burst in upon them.

"A most dreadful thing has happened!" he cried. "A terrible and grievous injury, an insult of the very first grade, has been inflicted upon your aged and most venerated father!"

"What is it?" asked the wife of Wang-hi.

"It is so terrible that I scarcely dare tell you," answered the neighbour, "but since you must know, this is it. Your debased and wholly ignoble husband has committed suicide on the doorstep of your honourable and heaven-afflicted father."

As no Chinaman does such a thing unless he has received an unforgivable injury from the person on whose doorstep he commits suicide, the venerable father of the afflicted wife of the altogether-too-infamous Wang-hi was seized by the authorities and cast into prison.

But the most distressing thing of all was that the honourable and highly-mightily-begotten Tuang-ho was beheaded.

"COMRADE HAMLET" IN RUSSIA.

Shakespearean Figure
In New Role.

London.
Stern, unsentimental Communists have no use for such bourgeois romances as "Romeo and Juliet."
But they have done their best with "Hamlet."

A Bolshevik film production shows Hamlet intending murder not for personal reasons—but merely to "liquidate" an oppressor of the proletariat.

The ghost is made out to be a sort of "stunt" engineered by Hamlet in order to get the support of the soldiers. And so on.

How difficult it must be to make films that are in tune with the serious mood of Five Year Planners may be gathered from the pages of "Twelve Studies in Soviet Russia"

edited by Margaret Cole.—Reuter.

SPAIN'S CINDERELLA FLEET.

Madrid.
The 89 ships composing the Spanish Fleet would never find a market—except as scrap iron! This, at any rate, is the complaint of Don Antonio de la Villa, member of the permanent Parliamentary Marine Commission.

"The Spanish Navy," he has stated, "remains under the Republic
what it was under the Monarchy—
the Cinderella Service."—Reuter.

NO PLACE LIKE PRISON

Amnesty No Boon
In Spain.

Sofia.
Many of the thousand prisoners who have been released under an Amnesty proclaimed on the birth of a Princess to King Boris and Queen Joanna are wishing that they were back in prison.

They are destitute men who committed minor offences at the beginning of the winter in order to receive free board and lodging during the cold weather. Now they find themselves turned out of goal into the cold, icy streets, and faced with the problem of finding shelter and earning enough to pay for their food.—Reuter.

RAT EXECUTED IN MID-AIR.

Durban.
A native at the Point was responsible for a record piece of execution. He was standing with an open knife in his hand, beside a coil of rope being unravelled on a ship when suddenly from out of the middle of it a dozen or more rats scampered.

One leaped into the air and as it passed him the native slashed at it and cut its head cleanly off at the neck.—Reuter.

DESERTED RAILWAY IN SPAIN.

British Restoration
Plan Abandoned.

Madrid.
"Ghost trains" stand on the lines of a "phantom railway" in the heart of Castille, north of Madrid.
Fifty miles of deserted track—
the remnant of an abandoned railway—are still there, but crumbling railway stations, shattered coaches, and rusty locomotives look almost as though a war might have been fought in the region.

Some years ago a group of British engineers looked over the ruins and planned to restore them, but were forced to abandon their project. They could not restore coal and iron mines to operation, and without the products of these the railway could not function. It had once run from Bezares to Villafra, where it joined the North Railway.
The ruins of coaches and locomotives that still line the tracks in places are almost like toys in comparison with modern ones.—Reuter.

ELECTRICITY GIVEN AWAY

Hammelgarden.
Electric current will be supplied

The reason given for this generosity is their prosperous financial condition.—Reuter.
